Inter(net)cession (opportunities)

Sure, the worldwide web has changed our society, but did you know that college students spend about 20 hours per week online?

As we pray for the harvest, they surf and explore world at their own pace, from the comfort of a dorm room where they retain control. This could be a great place for spiritual growth, but who is trustworthy and not selling something?

For over 2 years, EveryStudent.com has provided challenging, relevant essays to let students meet the Designer of the life they long to understand. And printable posters and word of mouth make it free and easy for any campus to promote.

Inter(net)rogative (real questions)

Of the 17,000 students reading these articles every month, many have emailed tough questions to Campus Crusade staff from this site...

"Why do we live only to die? Why do we go through so much pain? What is the point? Why do I feel so empty inside?"

"I went from one relationship to the other and had sex (I was so depressed... and suicidal at the time) and now even though I have stopped this behavior I still felt "dirty" and don't know how to get over this pain. Please help..."

Inter(net)vension (transformation)

Over 250 students each month are telling us that they just received Christ while visiting EveryStudent.com! Here are comments from three...

"It really meant a lot that you took the time to email me when you didn't even know me."

"After lots of soul searching and reflection, I am going to give my life to God & Jesus and will ask him to forgive me for my sins." [A student from a Hindu background]

"The information I read spoke to something deep inside of me....it has awakened something in my heart - a desire to know God, and to commit my life to pleasing Him! THANK YOU!!"

I thank God for your interest in these students and all you've done to see that they have access to the gospel.

In Him,
